

Salon: "Zero Impact": Expert Shoots Down Trump Demand That $485M Penalty Disappear Because He Won Election

In "Zero Impact: Expert Shoots Down Trump Demand That $485M Penalty Disappear Because He Won Election" (Salon, December 13, 2024), Salon discusses Donald Trump's attempts to dismiss a civil fraud judgment following his electoral victory.

In the article, Pollock Cohen managing partner, Adam Pollock, compared the judgment to regular expenses the Trump Organization must pay to maintain its buildings. He said, "They don't vanish the moment that you become president, whether they're the debt to the people of the state of New York in this $450 million judgment, this debt in the defamation case of almost $100 million, or the debt to the electric company every month on the property he owns."
